Dear Mr. Reese,

My name is Dalia N. Reales and I am class member for the Califia Farms Non-Dairy Class Action Settlement. I understand June 11, 2020 is the last day to request exclusion or objection to the settlement amount of $0.50 to $1 per product purchased for up to 15 products (totaling at maximum $15). I also understand the final approval hearing for the Califia Farms non-dairy class action settlement is July 9, 2020. Therefore, I hope this email finds you well today on Thursday the 11th of June 2020, as I would like to formally object this settlement amount and request higher compensation.

The settlement claim of maximum $15 is not sufficient for the violation of consumer rights. Califa's mislabeling and deceptive marketing of their nut-based milk products as containing vanilla when in fact the products contained artificial vanilla violates: Federal Trade Commission Act Section 5(a), Anti-Trust Laws, breach of duty, Federal Trade Commission Act 16 C.F.R. Part 501, Fair Packaging and Labeling Act, and therefore have violated federal guidelines.

In 2015, I began transitioning to a vegan lifestyle after battling inflammatory health conditions. Additionally, I work in cancer research (with a Masters in Epidemiology) and have researched at length the benefits of a more plant-rich lifestyle. I've grown up in a mostly pescatarian household, so omitting poultry and red meats weren't a challenge for me. Instead, the biggest challenge I thought I'd face was omitting milk and other dairy products from my diet. As a resolve, I tried all different types of plant and nut based 'milks' in an attempt to find a replacement for dairy. Califa wasn't widely sold in stores in my neighborhood in 2015 (Jamaica, NY) where healthy options aren't as readily available as fast-food chains and liquor stores. Therefore, when I found Califa's 48 oz coconut flavored almond milk a 24-minute drive from my home (in a more affluent area's supermarket) I would travel nearly monthly to purchase.

Califa in many supermarkets is pricier than it's competitors (Silk, Blue Diamond, etc.) and averages $5 per bottle. Therefore, a compensation of $0.50 or $1 per bottle purchased is not enough for deceiving consumers like me. I have spent time traveling and my hard earned money to purchase a product made by a company who deceived me by mislabeling artificial ingredients as natural.

I would like to understand my options for a more reasonable compensation. Violation of the Federal Trade Commission Act serves a penalty of $43,280 per violation. Please respond within 30 days at the email address provided (dreales89@gmail.com) or via phone: 347-833-9112 or certified mail to: 7602 21st Ave 1G, Brooklyn NY 11214.

Warmest Regards,
Dalia N. Reales
